WELCOME

1. Read this first — the magazine rack is free now

Your library lends full digital magazines — the real pages, the current issue — free, with nothing to return.

Here is the whole idea in one breath: the magazines you have paid for out of habit for years are very likely free through your library. Not summaries, not clippings — the full, current issue, every page, exactly as it appears on the newsstand, read on a tablet or computer at no charge.

There are no late fees and nothing to return, because a digital magazine simply sits in the app until you are done with it. You never put in a credit card, and there are no ads beyond the ones the magazine itself prints. It is one of the quietest, nicest bargains a library card unlocks.

I am Bill, from Bill's Home Tech here in Portage County, Ohio. When folks tell me their subscriptions have crept up, magazines are often the easiest thing to move to the free column. This guide shows you how.

GOOD TO KNOW

Before you renew a magazine subscription, check whether your library already carries it free. For a great many popular titles, it does.

THE SHORT VERSION

2. The short version

One free app, your library card, and you are reading this month's issues.

If you want the whole routine before we slow down, here it is.

- 1 On a tablet, install the free magazine app your library uses — often Flipster, and Libby carries magazines too.
- 2 Open it, find your library, and sign in with your card number and PIN.
- 3 Browse the titles, tap a magazine, and read the current issue, page by page.
- 4 Pinch to zoom in on small print, and turn pages with a flick.
- 5 Close it when you are done — there is nothing to return and no late fee.

That is the entire thing. Everything after this is detail — which app does what, how to read comfortably, and how to find back issues.

GOOD TO KNOW

Portage County District Library offers Flipster for digital magazines. Your library's own digital page lists exactly which apps and titles it carries, since that varies from place to place.

WHAT IT IS

3. What library magazines actually are

Full issues, not summaries — the same pages as print.

A digital library magazine is the complete issue — every article, every photo, every page — shown on your screen just as it looks in print. You are not reading a stripped-down web version or a few free articles; you are reading the whole magazine, the same one on the newsstand, for free.

The library pays a subscription on behalf of the whole community, the way it buys the paper copies for the reading room, only now the whole town can read at once without waiting for the single copy to come back. It is the reading room, made as big as the internet.

Most libraries offer this through one or two apps. Flipster is a common magazine newsstand, and Libby — the same app many people already use for e-books — carries magazines at a lot of libraries as well.

FLIPSTER

4. Reading magazines with Flipster

A digital newsstand built just for magazines.

Flipster is a newsstand app devoted to magazines, and it is the one Portage County District Library offers. You install it free, sign in with your library card, and see a rack of covers to choose from. Tap one and the current issue opens; you read it page by page, just like holding it.

Because it is built only for magazines, Flipster is simple and pleasant: cover view, page view, and the ability to zoom in. Some issues can be downloaded into the app to read without an internet connection, which is handy on a plane or in a waiting room. When you are finished, you simply close it.

TIP

In Flipster, download an issue to the app before a trip. You can then read it with no internet connection — perfect for flights, cabins, or waiting rooms.

LIBBY MAGAZINES

5. Reading magazines in Libby

If you already use Libby for books, magazines are right there too.

If you already borrow e-books and audiobooks with Libby, you may find magazines living in the very same app at your library. You borrow a magazine just as you borrow a book — a tap to 'borrow,' and it opens for reading — and it returns itself when the loan is up, with no late fee.

The nice thing about magazines in Libby is that there is nothing new to learn: the same app, the same card, the same borrow-and-return rhythm you already know. If your library carries magazines this way, it is the gentlest possible addition to a habit you already have.

GOOD TO KNOW

Whether magazines come through Flipster, Libby, or both depends on your library. It is worth opening each app you have and seeing what is there — you may already have the magazines and not know it.

BEST ON A TABLET

6. Why a tablet is the happiest screen

Big enough to read a full page in comfort.

You can read library magazines on a phone, a tablet, or a computer, but a tablet is far and away the most comfortable. A magazine page is designed to be held at roughly tablet size, so the whole page fits nicely and the type is large enough to read without constant zooming.

On a phone the pages feel cramped and you spend a lot of time pinching and dragging. On a computer it works fine but you are tied to the desk. A tablet in a comfortable chair, by contrast, feels just like the old magazine in your lap — which is exactly the point.

TIP

If you read magazines often and are choosing a device, a tablet with a larger screen is the one to get. It turns digital magazines from fiddly into a genuine pleasure.

READING COMFORTABLY

7. Reading comfortably — zoom and page views

A pinch makes any article as large as you like.

The one skill worth practicing is zooming. To make an article bigger, put two fingers on the screen and spread them apart; to shrink back, pinch them together. Once an article is enlarged, you can slide it around with one finger to read across and down. It takes a moment to get the knack, and then it is second nature.

Many apps also offer a 'text' or 'article' view that reflows the words into a clean, large column, stripping away the fancy layout so you can simply read. If the designed page is hard on your eyes, look for that option — it is a kindness built in for exactly this reason.

GOOD TO KNOW

Look for a 'text view' or 'article view' button. It reflows a cramped page into big, plain text — far easier on tired eyes than zooming around the designed layout.

FINDING TITLES

8. Finding your favorite titles

Browse the rack, or search by name.

When you open the app, you can browse the rack of covers the way you would scan a newsstand, or you can search for a magazine by name if you have a favorite in mind. Popular titles across news, cooking, home, hobbies, health, and current affairs are commonly carried, though the exact lineup is set by your library.

If a magazine you love is not there, it is worth asking the library — they sometimes add titles patrons request. And it is worth browsing, too: half the fun of a newsstand is discovering a magazine you would never have paid for but happily read when it is free.

Because the catalog differs by library, your own library's magazine page or a quick look in the app is the only way to know exactly what you can read.

BACK ISSUES

9. Back issues and keeping up

Catch up on months you missed, free.

Digital magazines usually keep a run of recent back issues, not just the newest one, so you can catch up on numbers you missed or go back to an article you remember. There is no extra charge for reading older issues — they are simply there in the app, a tap away.

Some apps let you follow a magazine so the newest issue appears automatically when it comes out, like having it delivered without the mailbox. It is a gentle way to keep up with a title you enjoy, on the magazine's own schedule rather than yours.

GOOD TO KNOW

Many apps let you 'follow' a title so each new issue shows up for you automatically — your favorites delivered to the app, free, the moment they publish.

READING OFFLINE

10. Reading without an internet connection

Download an issue and read it anywhere.

One of the best tricks is downloading an issue into the app while you are on wifi, so you can read it later with no internet at all. This is wonderful for travel, for a spot in the house where the signal is weak, or for a long wait somewhere. The issue lives on your tablet until you remove it.

Not every app handles this the same way, but most magazine apps offer some form of 'download to read offline.' Look for a small download arrow on the issue. Once it is saved, you can read on a plane, in the car, or in the garden without using any data.

WHATS ON THE RACK

11. What you will find on the rack

A broad newsstand — news, cooking, home, hobbies and more.

The range surprises most people. Libraries commonly carry the big news and current-affairs weeklies, cooking and food magazines, home and garden titles, health and fitness, travel, science and nature, history, crafts and hobbies, and plenty of special-interest magazines for everything from cars to quilting. The lineup is set by your library, but it is usually far broader than a single person would ever subscribe to.

That breadth is part of the pleasure. When a magazine costs you nothing, you will happily flip through a title you would never have paid for — and often find a new favorite. It turns reading from a short list of paid subscriptions into a whole newsstand to wander.

COOKING MAGAZINES

12. Cooking magazines and saving a recipe

A kitchen full of recipes you can keep.

Cooking and food magazines are among the most-read titles, and for good reason — a single issue can hold a season's worth of meals. When a recipe catches your eye, you do not have to tear out the page: most apps let you save a bookmark to the issue, and you can always zoom in on the ingredients list while you cook.

If you want a recipe handy at the stove, the simplest trick is to take a screenshot of the page on your tablet — press the two buttons your tablet uses for a picture — so it lives in your photos for quick reference. No scissors, no clutter, and the magazine stays whole for the next reader.

HOBBY TITLES

13. Hobby and special-interest magazines

The niche titles that are a joy to browse free.

The special-interest magazines are where the free newsstand really shines. Woodworking, quilting, model trains, gardening, photography, classic cars, birding, genealogy — the hobby titles that are pricey to subscribe to individually are often sitting right there, free. For anyone with a passion, it is a quiet treasure.

Browse by subject and you may discover a magazine devoted entirely to the thing you love, full of ideas and projects and fellow enthusiasts. It is the sort of find that makes people genuinely fond of their library all over again.

ON THE COMPUTER

14. Reading on a computer or big screen

No tablet? A computer works just fine.

If you do not have a tablet, do not worry — the magazine apps also work in a web browser on an ordinary computer. You open your library's magazine page, sign in with your card, and read on the big monitor. For some folks, a large desktop screen is actually the most comfortable of all, with the whole page in view and easy to enlarge.

Reading on a computer ties you to the desk, which suits some people and not others. But it means no one is shut out for lack of a tablet, and it is a fine way to try library magazines before deciding whether a tablet is worth buying.

EASY ON THE EYES

15. Making it easy on the eyes

Big, bright, and comfortable — however your eyes are doing.

Digital magazines can be far kinder to tired eyes than print, once you know the tricks. Zoom in to make the type as large as you like; turn the screen brightness up in a dim room; and reach for the 'text view' when a fancy layout is hard to follow. You are no longer stuck with whatever size the magazine was printed at.

If small print has kept you from magazines you used to love, this alone is reason to try. A good cooking or history magazine, blown up large and bright on a tablet, can be a real pleasure again rather than a squint.

GOOD TO KNOW

If your eyes tire, turn the brightness up, zoom the page large, and use text view. Many readers find a backlit tablet easier than print, especially in the evening.

SHARING AT HOME16. Sharing across the household

One card, magazines on everyone's tablet.

A household card works on more than one device, so you and your spouse can each read the same library's magazines on your own tablets at the same time — no waiting for the single copy, no squabbling over the new issue. Each of you can follow your own favorites, and nobody has to remember to pass it along.

It is a small thing, but it is one of the quiet advantages of digital over paper: the library's copy never runs out, so the whole house can read at once. Some families keep a card each, which works just as well.

A WORD ON NEWSPAPERS17. Newspapers, too

The same card often lends the daily paper.

While we are on the subject, it is worth knowing that many libraries lend digital newspapers as well as magazines, often through a separate app such as PressReader. If keeping up with the news matters to you, the same card may well cover your newspaper too, in full-page form.

We have a separate guide devoted just to free library newspapers if that appeals. For now, simply know that magazines are one corner of a larger free reading room, and the card that opens one often opens the other.

GETTING STARTED TODAY18. Getting started this afternoon

A ten-minute setup and you are reading.

If you would like to begin, set aside ten unhurried minutes with your tablet and your library card. Install the app your library uses, sign in once with your card number and PIN, and open the first magazine that catches your eye. That first issue is usually enough to win people over.

Do not try to set up everything at once. Read one magazine today, follow a favorite or two, and let the rest come as you go. It is your newsstand now, and it will be there whenever you want it.

GOOD TO KNOW

Begin with one magazine you already love. Reading a familiar favorite, free and in large type, is what makes the whole thing click for most people.

TRY BEFORE YOU CANCEL

19. Try it before you cancel anything

A gentle way to be sure before you let a subscription lapse.

If you are nervous about cancelling a magazine you have taken for years, you do not have to leap. Open the library app, find that same magazine, and read an issue or two there first. Once you have seen that it is the full, current issue — every page, free — you can let the paid subscription lapse at renewal time with an easy mind.

There is no rush and no risk in checking. The library's copy is not going anywhere, and you lose nothing by reading it alongside your paid one for a little while. Many people keep a foot in both worlds until they are simply in the habit of reaching for the free app first.

TRAVEL READING

20. Magazines for travel and waiting rooms

A stack of reading in your bag, weighing nothing.

Digital magazines are a traveler's friend. Instead of buying an armful of magazines at the airport, download a few issues into the app over your home wifi and carry a whole stack in a tablet that weighs less than one paper magazine. They are perfect for a flight, a long car ride as a passenger, or a spell in a waiting room.

Because the downloaded issues need no internet, they work anywhere — a cabin, a cruise, a hospital room with no signal. For anyone who travels, or who simply spends time waiting, having a tidy stack of good reading always in the bag is a real comfort, and it costs nothing.

A LOVELY GIFT

21. A lovely gift for a magazine lover

Set it up for someone, and the giving never stops.

If someone you love has read the same magazines for years, setting up the free library app on their tablet is a gift that keeps giving — their favorite reading, free, arriving fresh with every issue, with no renewal notices and no clutter. It is the sort of quiet, practical present that an older reader especially appreciates.

Set it up, follow their two or three favorites so new issues appear on their own, and show them the one gesture that matters. You have given them not a single magazine but a standing subscription to a whole newsstand, at no cost, for as long as they like.

IF IT WONT SIGN IN

22. If it will not sign in

Almost always a card, PIN, or branch mix-up.

If the app will not accept your card, check three things before anything else: that you chose the exact right library from the list (there are often several with similar names), that your card has not expired, and that you are entering the correct PIN. An expired card or a wrong PIN is behind most 'it will not let me in' troubles, and both are a quick fix at the library.

If all that is in order and it still balks, the library's help desk handles exactly this every day and can confirm your account is active. It is almost never anything wrong with your tablet — just a small mix-up with the card or the login, soon sorted.

GOOD TO KNOW

Picking the wrong library from the app's list is the single most common sign-in snag. Make sure it is your actual library, not a similarly named one elsewhere.

TABLET STORAGE

23. Keeping your tablet tidy

Remove old downloads so space never runs short.

The only housekeeping worth a thought is storage. Downloaded issues live on your tablet and take up a little room, so when you have finished with one, remove the download — usually a tap on a small trash or remove button. The magazine is still in the library; you are only clearing the copy from your device.

A tablet with plenty of free space runs happily; one crammed full can get sluggish. Clearing issues you are done with keeps everything smooth, and it takes only a moment. If your tablet ever warns that storage is low, old downloaded magazines are a fine first thing to tidy away.

TWO WAYS IN

24. Two ways people come to this — and both are fine

Dropping subscriptions, or simply reading more.

Some folks come to library magazines to stop paying for subscriptions; others just love the idea of a whole newsstand, free. Either way is a win, and it shapes where to start.

If you are dropping subscriptions

You would like to stop paying for magazines the library already carries.

- List the magazines you pay for, then check the app to see which are free there.
- Cancel the ones you find free, and follow them in the app so you never miss an issue.
- Keep paying only for the few, if any, your library does not carry.

If you just want to read more

Your budget is fine; you simply enjoy a good magazine and would like more of them.

- Browse the rack like a newsstand and sample titles you would never have bought.
- Follow a handful of favorites so new issues arrive automatically.
- Download a few issues before any trip so you always have something to read.

GOOD TO KNOW

Whichever you are, start by opening the app and simply browsing. Most people are surprised how many magazines they would happily read are sitting there free.

FOR THE GRANDKIDS

25. Children's magazines for visits

A quiet, ad-free treat when the little ones are over.

Many libraries carry children's magazines too, full of stories, puzzles, and gentle learning. On a tablet, with no advertisements and nothing to click away from, they make a calm, wholesome treat when the grandchildren visit — a world away from the noisy free games and videos that fill so much of the internet.

Sit a child down with a children's magazine on the tablet and you have a pleasant, screen-based activity you can feel good about. It is reading, it is free, and it is the sort of thing the parents are glad to see too.

KEEPING UP

26. Keeping up without the clutter

All your reading in one place, nothing piling up.

One quiet joy of digital magazines is the end of the pile. No more stacks of old issues on the coffee table, no recycling to haul out, no guilt over magazines you never got to. The reading lives tidily in the app, and when you are done with an issue it simply goes away — no clutter, no fuss.

For anyone trying to simplify a home, this is a small but real relief. You keep all the reading you enjoy and lose all the paper that came with it. The newsstand is as big as ever; your coffee table is clear.

PRIVACY AND ADS

27. A word on privacy and advertisements

No tracking games, just the magazine itself.

The library's magazine apps do not bombard you with the targeted advertisements and pop-ups that clutter so many free websites and apps. You see the advertisements the magazine itself prints — the same ones in the paper copy — and nothing more. The library is not selling your reading habits to anyone; it is simply lending you a magazine.

That makes for a calmer, cleaner read, and a safer one. There are no mysterious buttons trying to trick you into a subscription, no 'you have won a prize' nonsense — just the magazine, page by page, the way it was meant to be read.

HELPING A RELATIVE

28. Setting it up for a parent

A tidy tablet of favorite magazines is a lovely gift.

For an older parent who has read the same magazines for decades, moving them to the free library app is a genuine kindness — the same reading, without the stack of renewal notices. Set up the app on their tablet, sign in with their card, and follow their favorite titles so new issues simply appear.

Make the first issue large and comfortable so they see at once that it reads easily, and show them the one gesture that matters: pinch to zoom. A parent who realizes they can read their beloved magazine, in big clear type, for free, tends to be quietly delighted.

TIP

Set a parent up with just their two or three favorite magazines, 'followed' so new issues arrive on their own. A short, familiar rack beats a overwhelming newsstand of unknowns.

MAKE IT A HABIT

29. Making it a small, pleasant habit

A magazine with your morning coffee, free and waiting.

The folks who get the most from library magazines are the ones who fold it gently into their week — a cooking magazine with Sunday coffee, a news weekly over breakfast, a hobby title in a quiet evening hour. Pick one you love, follow it so each issue arrives on its own, and let the reading become a small, reliable pleasure rather than another thing to keep up with.

There is no need to read everything, and no guilt in skipping an issue, because nothing is piling up and nothing is wasted. Open the app when the mood takes you, read what appeals, and close it. It is your newsstand, on your own gentle schedule.

TIP

Follow just one or two favorites to begin with, so the app feels welcoming rather than crowded. You can always add more titles once the habit has settled in.

WHAT IT REPLACES

30. What it can quietly replace

A stack of paid subscriptions, gone to the free column.

It is worth tallying, once, what the free library app can take over. Many households pay for several magazines a year out of long habit — a cooking title, a news weekly, a hobby magazine, a home-and-garden one. A good share of those are very often sitting in the library app, free, the full current issue every time.

You need not drop them all at once, or at all. But knowing the free alternative is there lets you choose, at each renewal, whether a particular subscription is still worth paying for. For many readers, the honest answer turns out to be that the library already has it covered.

STAYING SAFE

31. Keeping it safe and legitimate

The real apps only, from the official app store.

Library magazine apps — Flipster, Libby, and the like — are entirely legitimate and are installed only from your device's official app store. You sign in with your real library card on the app's own screen, and that is the whole of it. There is never a payment, because the library has already paid.

If a website promises 'free magazines' and wants a credit card, or asks you to download something from outside the app store, that is not your library — close it. Let the official app store be your rule, and you will never go wrong.

WATCH OUT

A genuine library magazine app never asks for a credit card. If something does, it is not the real thing — get the app from your official app store instead.

COMMON MISTAKES

32. Common mistakes

Avoid these and your reading goes smoothly.

Nearly every snag comes down to a few simple things, each easy to fix.

- Reading on a cramped phone screen instead of a comfortable tablet.
- Not knowing about the zoom gesture, then giving up on small print.
- Missing the 'text view' that makes a busy page into big, plain type.
- Forgetting to download an issue before a trip, then having nothing to read offline.
- Keeping a paid subscription for a magazine the library already offers free.

TIP

Learn the pinch-to-zoom gesture and find the text-view button on day one. Those two things turn digital magazines from fiddly into a delight.

COMMON QUESTIONS

33. Common questions

The questions I hear most about library magazines.

Here are the ones that come up most often.

If yours is not here, a librarian or a quick call to me can sort it.

QUESTIONS

34. Are these the full magazines or just samples?

The full, current issue — every page.

The full issue, exactly as it appears in print: every article, every photo, cover to cover. It is not a sampler or a few free articles. You are reading the same magazine you would buy at the newsstand, free.

QUESTIONS

35. Is there a late fee if I keep one too long?

No — there is nothing to return.

None at all. A digital magazine simply sits in the app until you are done, and in apps like Libby it returns itself automatically. There are no late fees and nothing to carry back to the library.

QUESTIONS

36. Can I read on my phone or computer too?

Yes — but a tablet is far more comfortable.

You can read on a phone, tablet, or computer. A tablet is by far the happiest, because a magazine page fits it naturally. A phone works in a pinch but feels cramped, and a computer is fine if you do not mind sitting at the desk.

QUESTIONS

37. Which magazines can I get?

It depends on your library's lineup.

Libraries carry different sets of titles, commonly spanning news, cooking, home, hobbies, health, and current affairs. The only way to know exactly what yours offers is to look in the app or on your library's magazine page — and to ask, since libraries sometimes add titles patrons request.

QUESTIONS

38. Can I read with no internet, like on a plane?

Yes — download the issue first.

While you are on wifi, download the issue into the app using the little download arrow. Once it is saved on your tablet, you can read it anywhere with no internet at all — a flight, the car, or a weak-signal corner of the house.

QUICK RECAP

39. The quick recap

The whole guide in one glance.

- Your library lends full digital magazines free — real pages, current issues, no ads beyond the magazine's own.
- Flipster is a common magazine app (Portage County District Library offers it); Libby carries magazines too.
- A tablet is the most comfortable screen; pinch to zoom and look for a plain 'text view.'
- There are no late fees and nothing to return — just close the issue when done.
- Follow favorites so new issues appear automatically, and download issues to read offline.
- Only install the real apps from the official app store; they never ask for a credit card.

GOOD TO KNOW

Before you renew a single magazine, open your library's app and browse. The newsstand is already yours, free.

If a step involves electrical wiring, a gas appliance, a water heater, plumbing, or climbing a ladder — or if anything just doesn't feel safe — please stop and call a licensed professional (or give me a call at 330-200-8042). Bill's Home Tech and Bill Davis can't be responsible for any damage, data loss, or injury that results.

HOW I CAN HELP

Your Visit — and My Promise

In-home visit — $99 flat for your first visit. No contracts and no surprise charges, and a 30-day follow-up is included.

Remote Support — $49 for a screen-share session. I only connect with your permission, you watch the whole time, and you can end anytime. If I can't fix it over the screen-share, I refund the $49 — and if it turns out you need me in person, that $49 goes toward your visit. It's included free for Support Plan members ($39/mo).

GOOD TO KNOW

My promise — If you're not 100% satisfied with your visit, I'll come back at no charge, or refund the full $99. No questions, no awkwardness. That's how I'd want to be treated.
