A Second Look 25

A Note From Bill 25

Your Visit — and My Promise 26

WELCOME

1. Read this first — your card may hand you a whole newsstand

Many public libraries lend digital newspapers free — hundreds of them, full pages and all — through a service like PressReader.

Here is the heart of it: a lot of public libraries quietly pay for a service that lets you read newspapers on a phone, tablet, or computer — free, with your library card. The best known is PressReader, and it carries hundreds of papers, laid out page by page exactly as they look in print, from your hometown and from around the world.

If you have winced at the price of a newspaper subscription, or given one up and missed it, this is worth ten minutes. There is no credit card, no trial that turns into a bill, and no ads of the pushy sort — the library has already paid, the same way it pays for the papers on the rack inside the building.

I am Bill, from Bill's Home Tech here in Portage County, Ohio. Of all the things a library card unlocks, the newspapers are the piece people are most surprised by — and often the most delighted to find, because reading the paper is a daily pleasure worth keeping.

TIP

Newspapers are the one library service that differs most from place to place. Before anything else, check your own library's website to see whether it offers PressReader or a similar newspaper service — and exactly which titles.

THE SHORT VERSION

2. The short version

A card, a free app, and today's paper is on your screen.

If you would like the whole routine before we slow down and take it step by step, here it is.

- 1 Check your library's website to confirm it offers PressReader (or a similar newspaper service) and sign in options.
- 2 Install the free PressReader app on your phone or tablet, or open it in a web browser on a computer.
- 3 Choose to sign in through your library, search for your library by name, and enter your card number and PIN.

- 4 Browse by title or country, open a paper, and read — tap once for the full page, tap again to zoom into an article.

That really is all there is to it. Everything after this page is detail — reading the full page versus the text view, catching up on back issues, translating a foreign paper, and getting it onto the big screen.

GOOD TO KNOW

Some libraries offer newspapers through their own website or a different service rather than the PressReader app. If the steps above do not match, your library's 'newspapers' or 'digital resources' page will show the right way in.

WHAT IT IS

3. What PressReader actually is

A digital newsstand your library pays for.

PressReader is a newsstand in app form. Instead of one newspaper, it carries a vast rack of them — daily papers, weeklies, and many magazines too — from the United States and dozens of other countries. You read the genuine article: the same pages, photographs, and layout that went to print, not a stripped-down summary.

Your library buys access on your behalf, so to you it is free. There is nothing to subscribe to and nothing to cancel. You simply sign in with your library card and read as much as you like, as often as you like.

WATCH OUT

Think of PressReader as the library's magazine-and-newspaper rack, moved onto your tablet — except it never runs out of copies and you never have to put them back.

WHY IT MATTERS

4. Why this is worth your time

It replaces a paid subscription, and then some.

A single newspaper subscription can cost real money over a year, and most of us would like to read more than one paper — the local news, a big national paper, perhaps a paper from a place we used to live. Buying all of those would be out of the question. Through the library, you can often read them all for nothing.

For anyone on a fixed income, that is a genuine saving on something you would otherwise do without. And for the simple pleasure of it — turning the pages of the morning paper with your coffee — there is nothing quite like having the whole newsstand at your fingertips.

YOUR CARD

5. What you need to get started

A library card, its PIN, and a device you already own.

Everything hinges on a library card and the PIN or password tied to it, plus a phone, tablet, or computer. If you live in Portage County and do not have a card, one is free to get with a photo ID and proof of address, and many systems let you start online.

If you have the card but have forgotten the PIN, the library will look it up or reset it in a moment, over the phone or at the desk. You will usually need that PIN to sign in to the newspaper service, so it is worth sorting out first.

WATCH OUT

A lapsed card is the most common reason a newspaper app suddenly stops working. If it says your card is not valid, it has very likely just expired — a quick renewal at the library fixes it.

INSTALLING

6. Installing the app and signing in

The same gentle steps on a phone or tablet.

On a phone or tablet, open your app store, search for PressReader, and install the free app. Open it and look for an option to sign in or connect through a library (sometimes under 'accounts' or a little person-shaped icon). Choose 'library or group,' search for your library by name, and enter your card number and PIN.

You may be invited to make a simple free PressReader account with your e-mail as well, so it remembers your favorite papers across your devices. That is normal and still free — the library access is what makes it cost nothing.

GOOD TO KNOW

If you cannot find the 'sign in through your library' option, your library's website usually has a direct link that logs you in automatically — start there and it will hand you off to the app or the web page already signed in.

READING ON A COMPUTER

7. Reading on a computer, too

No tablet needed — a web browser works.

You do not need a phone or tablet at all. PressReader works in an ordinary web browser on a laptop or desktop; you simply go to the website, sign in through your library, and read on the big screen. Many people find a computer screen the most comfortable of all for reading a full newspaper page.

A number of libraries also provide a direct newspaper link on their own website that signs you in without any fuss. If you are more at home on a computer than a phone, that is the easiest path of all.

8. Two ways to read: full page or text view

The handsome page, or the easy-to-read column.

Most newspaper apps give you two ways to read, and it is worth knowing both. The full-page view shows the paper exactly as printed — headlines, photos, and layout — which is lovely to browse. You tap or pinch to zoom in on the article you want.

The text view, sometimes called 'article view,' pulls that story out into a clean, single column of large, reflowed type, with no squinting and no zooming. For reading an article straight through, especially on a phone, the text view is kinder to the eyes.

TIP

Browse in the full-page view to find what interests you, then switch to the text or article view to actually read it. You get the pleasure of the real page and the comfort of big, clear type.

FINDING PAPERS

9. Finding your paper among hundreds

Search, browse by place, or save your favorites.

With so many titles, a little navigation helps. You can search for a paper by name, or browse by country and region to find the local paper of a place that matters to you. Big national papers, your nearest city's paper, and papers from abroad all sit on the same virtual rack.

Once you find papers you like, mark them as favorites so they rise to the top each time you open the app. That turns a sprawling newsstand into your own short, familiar list — the three or four papers you actually read.

GOOD TO KNOW

Exactly which titles your library offers depends on the library's subscription. If a particular paper you want is not there, ask the library — sometimes they can add titles, and they always like to know what patrons want.

BACK ISSUES

10. Catching up on recent back issues

Missed a day? The last little while is usually still there.

You are not limited to only the latest edition. Most newspaper services keep a stretch of recent back issues — often the past several days or more — so if you missed the paper for a few days you can scroll back and catch up. The exact window depends on the service and the title.

This is a quiet blessing for travelers and for anyone who reads in bursts rather than every single day. The paper waits for you, and nothing piles up on the porch.

FOREIGN PAPERS

11. Papers from around the world — and translation

Read your old hometown paper, even from abroad.

One of the real joys of PressReader is the sheer reach of it: papers from dozens of countries, in many languages. If you came from elsewhere, or have family overseas, you can read the paper from home as easily as the one from down the road.

Many of these services can even translate an article into your language with a tap — not perfect, but perfectly good enough to follow the news. It is a small wonder to read a paper from across the ocean, in English, at your kitchen table.

ON THE BIG SCREEN

12. Getting it onto a bigger screen

A tablet in a chair, or a computer at the desk.

Newspapers are not really a television activity — the pages are too detailed to read from across the room. But a tablet held comfortably in your chair, or a computer at the desk, gives you plenty of screen to enjoy the full page without strain.

If your eyes prefer the largest possible type, read on a computer in the text view and make the browser's text bigger. Between a roomy screen and the article view, there is a comfortable setup for everyone.

MAGAZINES TOO

13. It often carries magazines, too

Many of the same services lend magazines as well.

PressReader and services like it frequently carry magazines right alongside the newspapers — news weeklies, hobby titles, and more. So the one sign-in may hand you both the morning paper and a stack of magazines, all free with the same card.

If magazines are what you are really after, we have a separate guide on the library's digital magazines through Flipster and Libby, which many libraries offer in addition to or instead of PressReader. Between them, the whole newsstand is covered.

A MORNING ROUTINE

14. Building a comfortable morning routine

The paper and your coffee, just as it always was.

Half the pleasure of the paper is the ritual of it — settling in with a cup of coffee and reading the day in. Digital newspapers keep that ritual perfectly intact; it is only the paper that has changed, not the habit. Keep the tablet where you take your coffee, and opening the morning paper becomes as natural as it ever was.

Set your favorite papers so the app opens to them, and the whole thing takes a single tap. There is no wait for delivery, no wet paper on a rainy porch, and nothing to recycle afterward. For a great many readers, once the routine settles in, they would not go back.

TIP

Keep the tablet on the kitchen table or by your reading chair, charged and ready. A habit lives or dies by how easy it is to reach for — make the paper the easiest thing on the table.

YOUR HOMETOWN PAPER

15. Reading your hometown or childhood paper

The news from where you are from, wherever you are now.

One of the quiet gifts of a digital newsstand is distance made small. If you moved away from the town you grew up in, or have family scattered across the country, you can often read the paper from those places as easily as your own. The news from home, the names you know, the places you remember — all a tap away.

Browse by state and city to hunt down a particular paper. Not every small-town paper is carried, but a surprising number are, along with the bigger regional papers that cover them. For anyone who has ever felt far from where they started, it is a comforting thing to have.

LOCAL NEWS

16. Local news, notices and the community

Keeping up with home, not just the headlines.

National headlines are everywhere, but it is the local paper that tells you what is really happening where you live — the council meeting, the school news, the church bazaar, the obituaries of neighbors. That community thread is precisely what many people miss most when a paper gets too dear to keep.

Where your library's service carries your local or regional paper, you get that thread back. If it does not carry the very smallest local paper, that paper often has its own free or low-cost website, and the library staff can point you to the best way to follow local news.

PUZZLES

17. The crossword and the puzzles

Yes, the puzzles come along too.

For many readers, the crossword, the word jumble, and the sudoku are the whole reason to open the paper. The good news is that in the full-page view you get the puzzles exactly as printed, so you can work them on paper if you like — print the page, or just read the clues from the screen and fill in a puzzle book beside you.

Some people keep a cheap puzzle pad next to the tablet for exactly this. It is a lovely, gentle way to keep the mind limber, and it comes free with the rest of the paper.

SAVING ARTICLES

18. Saving an article to read later

Bookmark the good ones and come back.

When you come across an article you would like to read properly later, or keep, most newspaper services let you bookmark or save it. It then waits in a tidy list so you are not trying to remember which paper and which page it was in. This is handy for recipes, how-to pieces, and long reads you want to savor.

You can often share a saved article too, by e-mail or text, to send to a friend or family member. A little folder of saved pieces becomes your own clippings file, without the drawer full of yellowing cuttings.

PRINTING & SHARING

19. Printing or sharing an article

Send it to a friend, or print it for the fridge.

If you want a paper copy — a recipe for the kitchen, an article for a friend without a tablet — you can usually print just the piece you want, either from the app or from the website on a computer. That saves you printing a whole sprawling page to get one column.

Sharing by e-mail or text is just as easy, and is a warm way to stay in touch: 'saw this and thought of you' never goes out of style. The article travels as a tidy link or a clean copy, not a blurry photo of a page.

BIGGER TYPE

20. Making the type bigger and clearer

No more squinting at tiny newsprint.

Newsprint has always been small, and it does not get kinder with the years. The text or article view is the answer: it lifts a story out of the cramped page and lays it out in a single, clean column of large type that you can make bigger still. Many readers find it far easier than the paper ever was.

On a computer you can enlarge the whole page in the browser; on a tablet you pinch to zoom. Between the article view and a little zooming, there is a comfortable reading size for every pair of eyes.

GOOD TO KNOW

If newsprint has become a strain, the article view alone is reason enough to read the paper digitally — big, clear type with no squinting, on every story.

READ ALOUD

21. Having an article read to you

Rest your eyes and listen instead.

If your eyes tire, or you would simply rather listen while you potter about, many devices can read an on-screen article aloud in a computer voice. On a tablet or computer there is usually a 'read aloud' or 'speak' feature in the settings or the browser. It is not a polished narration, but it is perfectly clear for catching up on the news hands-free.

Paired with the text view, read-aloud turns the morning paper into something you can take in over breakfast without holding anything at all. We have a separate guide on read-aloud and large-type settings if you would like more.

IS IT PRIVATE

22. Is my reading private?

Reasonably so — and far better than many apps.

A fair question in these times. Reading through your library is about as private as reading gets online. The library is not in the business of selling your habits, and the newspaper service is paid for, not ad-driven, so you are not being tracked to sell you things the way a free news website might.

As always, it is wise to use a sensible password on any account you make and to sign in only through your library or the official app. But of the ways to read the news today, the library's is among the most respectful of your privacy.

TWO WAYS IN

23. Two ways people come to this — and both are fine

Saving money, or simply reading more widely.

Some folks come to library newspapers to trim a bill; others simply want to read more papers than they could ever buy. Either way, you win — and knowing which you are helps you start in the right place.

If you are trimming a subscription

You are paying for a paper (or wish you still could) and would like the same news for free.

- Check whether your own paper, or a comparable one, is on your library's newspaper service.
- Set it as a favorite so it opens first, just like having it delivered.
- Cancel the paid subscription only once you are happy the free version suits you.

If you just want to read more widely

Your budget is fine; you would simply like a broader diet of news and views.

- Browse by country and region to find papers you would never have bought.
- Keep a national paper, a local one, and one from a place you love.
- Use the translation feature to dip into papers in other languages.

GOOD TO KNOW

However you arrived, favoriting three or four titles turns the whole sprawling newsstand into a tidy, familiar morning read.

THE WEEKEND PAPER

24. The big weekend editions

Those fat Sunday papers, without the fat price.

For a great many readers, the weekend paper is the treat of the week — the thick Sunday edition with its longer stories, the magazine, the book and arts pages, the puzzles saved for a slow morning. Those big editions are often the dearest to buy, which makes reading them free through the library especially sweet.

The full weekend edition comes through just as it does in print, section by section, so you lose none of the pleasure. Settle in with a second cup of coffee and work through it at leisure, the way a Sunday paper is meant to be read.

If anything, the digital version is kinder here: no enormous stack of newsprint to wrangle, and the puzzles are fresh each time rather than already done by someone else in the house. The ritual stays; only the clutter goes.

THE SECTIONS

25. Sports, comics, TV listings and the rest

All the sections you turn to first.

A newspaper is many little papers bundled together, and everyone has the section they turn to first — the sports, the comics, the crossword, the arts, the business pages, the television listings. Reading digitally, you still get all of them, laid out as printed, and you can jump straight to your favorite part or wander through the lot.

The sports fan can follow the teams, the comics lover gets the funnies, and the puzzler gets the puzzles — all in the one free paper. Nothing is trimmed away to save space the way a stripped-down news app might; it is the whole paper, sections and all.

If there is one section you read above all others, remember you can bookmark or save pieces from it, and in some papers jump to it directly. Your paper, your order, your pleasure.

FOR THE HOMEBOUND

26. A quiet gift for someone homebound

The world delivered, when getting out is hard.

For someone who cannot get out easily — after an illness, in winter, or simply as the years make driving harder — the daily paper is more than news; it is a thread to the wider world, and losing it can feel like a shrinking of life. Free digital newspapers hand that thread right back, delivered to a tablet by the chair.

Setting it up for a homebound friend or relative is a genuine kindness. Load the app on a tablet, sign in with their card, favorite the papers they love, and make the type large. Show them the one simple motion — open the paper and read — and leave the rest.

The world arriving each morning, with no trip to the end of the drive and no stairs to the porch, can brighten a housebound day more than you might think. It is a small setup that gives back every single morning.

HELPING A RELATIVE

27. Setting it up for a parent

A daily pleasure, handed to someone you love.

For an older parent who misses the paper — perhaps the local one stopped printing, or the subscription got too dear — setting up free library newspapers is a thoughtful, practical gift. Install the app on their tablet, sign in with their card, and mark their favorite papers so the right ones open first.

Show them just the one thing they will do most — open a favorite paper and read it — and leave the rest for later. Write their card number and PIN on a slip of paper kept safe, in case the app ever asks again. A parent with the morning paper back tends to be very glad indeed.

TIP

Set a parent's two or three favorite papers before you hand the tablet back. Opening to a familiar front page, rather than a sea of unfamiliar titles, is what makes it feel like their paper again.

STAYING SAFE

28. Keeping it safe and legitimate

Only the real app, only through your library.

Because this is advertised as 'free newspapers,' a word on safety is worth it. The genuine service — PressReader and the like — is installed only from your phone's official app store or reached through your own library's website, and you sign in only with your real library card. That is the safe path, and the only one you need.

If a website promises 'free newspapers' and asks for a credit card, or wants you to download something from outside the app store, that is not the library's service — close it. The real thing never asks you to pay, because the library already has.

WATCH OUT

The genuine newspaper service never asks for a credit card. If something does, it is not your library's service — back out and go in through your library's website or the official app store instead.

BEST DEVICE

29. The best device for reading the paper

A tablet or a computer, not really a phone.

A newspaper page is a big, detailed thing, and it reads best on a big, roomy screen. A tablet held comfortably in your chair is the happy medium for most people — large enough to see a page, light enough to hold. A laptop or desktop is grand too, especially if you like to enlarge the text right up. A phone works in a pinch, but it is the least comfortable; stick to the article view there.

If you are choosing one device for the library's whole shelf — papers, magazines, books, and the rest — a tablet is the single most useful thing to own. It does nearly everything well.

TIP

If you only read the paper on a phone, lean on the text or article view and make the type large. On a tablet or computer, the full page comes into its own.

OTHER NEWS TOOLS

30. Other news the library unlocks

PressReader is not the only door.

Besides a newsstand service like PressReader, many libraries subscribe to news and magazine databases that carry articles from a great range of publications, handy for looking up a particular story or researching a topic. These live on the library's 'databases' or 'research' page and are reached the same way, with your card.

If your library does not carry PressReader, it may well carry one of these instead, so it is worth a look at the full list. Between a newsstand app and a news database, most libraries give you a generous way to follow and search the news for free.

A PAPER THAT STOPPED

31. When your local paper has shrunk or stopped

The library can help you find what replaced it.

Many small-town papers have thinned out or stopped printing altogether, which is a real loss. If the paper you relied on is gone, the library is a good ally: the staff can point you to whatever now covers local news — a regional paper, a community website, or a public-radio site — and show you how to follow it.

It is not always a perfect replacement, but there is usually something, and a librarian is exactly the right person to help you find the most trustworthy local source now. Do not assume the news from home is simply gone; ask.

A WORD ON TRUST

32. Reading the news wisely

Real papers, read with a steady head.

One quiet virtue of a service like PressReader is that it carries established, named newspapers — real publications with editors and standards — rather than the anonymous, stirred-up stuff that floats around social media. Reading actual papers is a healthier diet of news than scrolling a feed, and it is calmer besides.

Even so, read with the same steady head you always have: compare a big story across a couple of papers, notice the difference between news and opinion pages, and do not let any single source work you up. The newsstand gives you the range to see a story from more than one side — a good habit at any age.

COMMON MISTAKES

33. Common mistakes

Avoid these and the morning paper just appears.

Nearly every snag comes down to one of a few simple things, and all are quick to fix.

- Assuming your library offers newspapers without checking — this is the service that varies most.
- Letting the library card expire, then thinking the app is broken when it only needs renewing.
- Reading only the full-page view and squinting, when the text view gives big, clear type.

- Picking the wrong library from the list, so the card is rejected.
- Forgetting to favorite your papers, so you hunt through hundreds each morning.

TIP

If a title you want is missing, ask the library whether they can add it. Many are glad to, and they rely on patrons to tell them what to carry.

COMMON QUESTIONS

34. Common questions

The questions I hear most about library newspapers.

Here are the ones that come up most often at the kitchen table.

If yours is not here, it is likely a quick answer — call the branch, or call me, and we will sort it.

QUESTIONS

35. Is this really free?

Yes — your library has already paid.

Completely free. Your library buys access to the newspaper service out of its budget, the same way it pays for the papers on the rack inside the building. You never enter a credit card, there is no trial, and there is nothing to cancel. The only requirement is a valid library card.

QUESTIONS

36. Which newspapers can I read?

Often hundreds — but it depends on your library.

Services like PressReader carry hundreds of papers from the United States and around the world, plus many magazines. Exactly which titles you can reach depends on your library's subscription, so your library's website is the surest list. If a paper you want is missing, ask — they may be able to add it.

QUESTIONS

37. Can I read papers from other countries?

Yes, and you can often translate them.

That is one of the best features. You can browse papers from dozens of countries in many languages, and most services will translate an article into your language with a tap. It is not flawless, but it is more than good enough to follow the news from a place that matters to you.

QUESTIONS

38. How far back do the papers go?

Usually a stretch of recent issues.

You are not stuck with only today's edition. Most services keep a window of recent back issues — often several days or more, depending on the title — so you can catch up if you missed a few days. Older archives vary and may be limited, so read recent papers as they come.

QUESTIONS

39. Do I need a tablet, or will a computer do?

A computer works beautifully.

No tablet required. The service works in an ordinary web browser on a laptop or desktop, and many people find the big screen the most comfortable way to read a full newspaper page. A phone works too, though the article view is kinder to the eyes there.

QUESTIONS

40. Can I use it on more than one device?

Yes — your reading follows your account.

Sign in on your tablet and your computer both, and your favorites and saved articles follow you between them. Start the paper over breakfast on the tablet and finish at the desk later if you like. One library card covers all your devices, so there is no need to choose just one.

QUESTIONS

41. What if my library does not offer newspapers?

Ask — there may be another way in.

If your library does not carry PressReader, it may offer a different newspaper or news-database service, so check its full list or ask at the desk. Many papers also have their own free or low-cost websites, and the staff can point you to the most trustworthy way to follow the news you care about. It is always worth asking before you assume there is nothing.

QUICK RECAP

42. The quick recap

The whole guide in one glance.

- Many libraries lend digital newspapers free through PressReader or a similar service — hundreds of papers, full pages and all.
- It is free with your library card: no credit card, no subscription, nothing to cancel.
- Install the free app or use a web browser, sign in through your library, and read.
- Use the full-page view to browse and the text view for big, clear type.
- You can read papers from around the world and translate them with a tap.
- Newspapers vary most of all by library — check your library's website for what yours carries.

GOOD TO KNOW

Favorite three or four papers and you have handed yourself the morning newsstand, free, for as long as you hold a library card.

BILL'S HERE TO HELP

43. You do not have to do this alone

You just have to remember that a friendly, patient person is one call away.

I hope this guide made free library newspapers feel a little less daunting and a lot more doable. Keep it in a drawer with your other home papers, come back to a page whenever you need it, and do not worry for a moment about memorizing anything.

When you would rather have a hand, that is exactly what I do. I come to your home, work at your pace, and never make you feel rushed or silly for asking. A first visit is a flat $99, and for the parts that do not need me on-site I can often help right on your screen for $49.

Every visit comes with a 30-day, come-back-free guarantee. I am a patient tech helper, so for library accounts and apps I will happily sit with you until your card is linked and everything is working.

GOOD TO KNOW

Call or text me at (330) 200-8042, or visit BillsHomeTech.com. Serving Atwater and all of Portage County. 30+ years of patient, plain-English tech help — and if you are ever not 100% happy with a visit, I will make it right or refund it. That is a promise. — Bill

BEFORE YOU GO

A Note From Bill

A quick note from Bill. I write these guides to make home tech a little less frustrating, and I do my best to keep every step accurate and up to date. Still, every home, device, and setup is a bit different, so I can't promise a guide will match yours exactly or fix your particular problem. These guides are for general information only — they're not professional, legal, or financial advice, and they don't replace your device's own manual or the manufacturer's instructions. Please go slow, use your own good judgment, and use everything here at your own risk. If a step involves electrical wiring, a gas appliance, a water heater, plumbing, or climbing a ladder — or if anything just doesn't feel safe — please stop and call a licensed professional (or give me a call at 330-200-8042). Bill's Home Tech and Bill Davis can't be responsible for any damage, data loss, or injury that results.

HOW I CAN HELP

Your Visit — and My Promise

In-home visit — $99 flat for your first visit. No contracts and no surprise charges, and a 30-day follow-up is included.

Remote Support — $49 for a screen-share session. I only connect with your permission, you watch the whole time, and you can end anytime. If I can't fix it over the screen-share, I refund the $49 — and if it turns out you need me in person, that $49 goes toward your visit. It's included free for Support Plan members ($39/mo).

GOOD TO KNOW

My promise — If you're not 100% satisfied with your visit, I'll come back at no charge, or refund the full $99. No questions, no awkwardness. That's how I'd want to be treated.
